

Nature, Rocks and Diamonds

Won DeBeers's Diamonds Today award long before people were using raw stones in jewelry. I carved Maine rocks into elongated forms with a diamond saw. The Japanese River rocks were carved into to give them a lighter feeling in contrast to the roughhewn stones. Both were drilled and carved with diamond tools. A cradle of 14k gold was made for each stone and the diamonds were the rivets that held all the parts together.

Sticks and Stones

Was in the Fuller Craft Museum "Celebrating Ten Years of Master Craft Artists"
Beach stones were carved with diamond tools and set with white and cognac Diamonds.
The seaweed links were hand crafted of 18k gold.
